

Irish pompanos are actually mojarras, silvery tall-bodied fish with deeply forked tails and large jaws. These fish extend their jaw down and out to catch small shrimp, crabs and other crustaceans on the sea floor. Irish pompanos live in shallow sandy or grassy areas close to shore.